Campbell County Responds to Rising Energy Costs By R. David Laurrell, County Administrator

Rising energy costs are on everyone's mind and County is making changes in the way we do business in support of lowering our energy consumption. Many of these strategies can be utilized at home as well to help reduce your reliance on energy and ultimately help the family budget. While higher energy costs can be a drain on your wallet, some relatively simple changes can help brighten the outlook and put some of that money back in your pocket.

Three of the biggest expenses we all have are heating and cooling our buildings, lighting our buildings and grounds, and gas and diesel fuel costs for vehicles. To address those issues the County has implemented a number of practices. To reduce heating and cooling costs the County adopted policies to begin adjusting summer cooling to no lower than 74 degrees and winter heating to no more than 70 degrees. According to experts each degree of increase in the summer and decrease in the winter can reduce your energy bill by 2 percent. That means decreasing summer cooling demand by 5 degrees can save up to 10% in energy use.

In addition to adjusting the thermostats we are also looking at ways to not heat and cool areas that are not in constant use and only do that on demand. If a room isn't being used then consider turning off the heating and cooling if that's practical. Using the same philosophy we are beginning to implement strategies to not use lighting when it isn't needed (a vacant room for example) and to match the lighting needs with more energy efficient lighting appliances that provide what light is needed, but not more than what is needed. We're looking at whether or not natural lighting can do the trick, and as our lighting requires replacing, we will match lighting needs with new energy efficient fixtures.

We are continuing to look at ways to maximize our space use by having less space used more frequently-space sharing. We all have to heat, cool and in some cases light building space 24 hours a day; so if we can use less space for longer periods we can save significantly on energy consumption to deliver the same services. If two people can use the same space over a 16 hour period every day that cuts our energy cost in half from only having the space used for eight hours a day. Finally on the building front, the County is using a design concept on all new construction and renovation projects called LEED-Low Energy Environmental Design. The process incorporates engineering and architectural review to utilize natural lighting, heating and cooling components to reduce energy demand.

The County's goal with our vehicle fleet is to reduce fuel consumption by 25% over the next three years. We'll accomplish this in a number of ways. First, if we don't have to drive we won't. We're continuing to look at ways to allow technology to be used in lieu of For example, video conferencing and in-the-field data communications allow our employees to provide services without having to drive to another location. Second, as we replace our fleet on our regular rotation we'll be looking at vehicles that have increased fuel mileage standards. This can often be accomplished through smaller vehicles, or newer technology vehicles that are making improvements with each model year. Third, to help our employees manage their wallets better we're looking on a case-by-case basis to set up work schedules with longer hours on fewer days. That means saving employees up to 20% of their commuter costs by working 40 hours in four days instead of 40 hours in five days. That doesn't always work depending upon the nature of the job, but whenever possible we're looking for ways to save our employees' hard earned dollars without sacrificing customer service.

The schools have done a great job in restricting bus travel that is not required and rethinking their bus routes to maximize the number of riders. save miles driven as well as cost to operate. It doesn't cost much more to run a full bus than an empty one, but the fuel cost per person can change from five person miles per gallon with an empty bus to more than 300 person miles per gallon with a full bus. That's a big difference, so for those of you out there who drive your cars to school you might want to rethink using the bus and saving yourself a ton of money! The same reason that the cost to operate a full bus is less per person than an empty one holds true for the rest of us well. See if you can't find others to share a ride with to work, school, or the grocery store. By adding just one person to your car you can cut your gas cost in half, additional two-thirds, adding a person riding by yourself.

people cuts it by "If we take a look at how we and use energy we can all find third substantial savings and still costs maintain the standard of living three-quarters less we've come to expect without than what it cost for too much real sacrifice. you alone. That's might even give us a reason to the same as paying slow down just a bit and enjoy $1 a gallon when the people around us and what you compare it to we already have." -R. David Laurrell costs as low as they were for a number of years; which was the case up until about four years ago when they started to rise, we all took advantage of those lower costs and became accustomed to the convenience it helped provide. If we take a look at how we use energy we can all find substantial savings and still maintain the standard of living we've come to expect without too much real sacrifice. It might even give us a reason to slow down just a bit and enjoy the people around us and what we already have.

Keeping that in mind, don't forget about all the opportunities we have here locally for vacation and recreation opportunities. Not only will you be saving yourself a pile of money, but you'll be supporting the local economy to boot!

Those are just a few of the energy savings strategies that Campbell County is implementing to help save taxpayer dollars in the provision of County services. We'll continue to look for ways to save even more and hope that you have success as well.

Campbell County Welcomes Graham Packaging Expansion

In August, Governor Timothy M. Kaine announced that Graham Packaging Company, L.P., a global leader in the design, sale, and manufacture of custom, blow-molded plastic containers, will invest $12.07 million to expand its manufacturing facility in the Town of Altavista in Campbell County. The company currently employs thirty-one, and the expansion will result in the creation of at least ten new positions, with the potential for additional new employment. This expansion project will take place over a thirty month period.

Graham Packaging is a global company in operation since 1960, with 87 plants worldwide. Graham acquired O-I Plastic, a subsidiary of Owens-Illinois, Inc., in 2004, thus doubling the company's size. At the time of this acquisition, Graham purchased the former Owens-Illinois facility. located on Ogden Road, and became a plastic bottle supplier for Abbott Nutrition/Ross Laboratories, also in Altavista. The plant plans to now diversify its production and begin serving a broader clientele.

The Tobacco Indemnification & Community Revitalization Commission, Virginia Economic Development Partnership, Virginia Department of Business Assistance, Region 2000 Economic Development Council, Town of Altavista, and Campbell County participated in this project.

Brookneal Wireless Broadband System Assessment Initiative

During Fiscal Year 2008, Campbell County completed an evaluation of the Brookneal 501 Corridor Wireless Broadband Internet system's effectiveness and the potential to expand wireless broadband into the underserved areas of the county. It was determined that the Brookneal broadband wireless system is operating efficiently, but there still is a lack of broadband service in the Brookneal area. Based upon the volume of demand and the start-up costs of a wireless broadband system, the expansion or creation of such a system is questionable for the Brookneal area as well as other rural areas in the county. In their priorities for Fiscal Year 2009, the Board of Supervisors adopted an initiative to perform a broadband assessment, which would include the research obtained during the previous evaluation of the wireless broadband system. The assessment will provide the breadth and depth of broadband service in the County, the providers involved, and the prices and service packages available. The County will also be identifying the various options and alternatives of hi-speed connectivity throughout the county.

If you would like to provide any written comments relating your experience with or need for hi-speed internet connectivity, you may send all feedback on this initiative to: Campbell County Economic Development, P.O. Box 100, Rustburg, VA 24588. Please remember only written comments can be incorporated in this project, and you will need to include your contact information in case we need to get back in touch with you.

Get to Know...Campbell County's Virginia Cooperative Extension

Campbell County has a public office that seems to be a hidden secret. The Virginia Cooperative Extension Campbell County Office is actually no secret at all. Virginia Cooperative Extension is a department of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences in the two land grant universities in Virginia, Virginia Tech and Virginia State. VCE has an office in almost every county and city across the state of Virginia.

Virginia Cooperative Extension's name helps to define what the department is. The department is "Cooperative" in that funding comes from federal state, and local sources. The "Extension" part of the name comes from the mission of VCE; to provide research based educational programs and materials to local citizens.

Todd Scott serves as the local Agriculture and Natural Resources Agent and works with local producers in finding practical and innovative ways to improve the productivity of their farms. These agents offer programs in the form of field days, seminars, and certification programs; they also handle producer and homeowner troubleshooting and problem solving. The Campbell County 4-H program, under the leadership of Elizabeth Narehood, offers 4-H clubs, school enrichment, workshops, camps, and day camps, all of which are open to Campbell County youth, ages 5-18. VCE Campbell County also offers nutrition programs, led by Linda Stephens, a Family Nutrition Program Assistant. This federally funded program focuses on educating youth in low income areas.

Our office is pleased to serve the citizens of Campbell County. If you have an interest in our programs, resources, or becoming a volunteer, we'd love to hear from you. Please contact us at (434) 332-9538, or by visiting our website online at: http://www.ext.vt.edu/offices/campbell.

Thinking of Starting A Home-Based Business?

There are a few simple steps to obtaining local permits and licenses for your home occupation. First, visit the Community Development Department and request a home occupation permit. The staff will ask you a few questions about your business plans, and then review the zoning and building code requirements with you. Some of the factors to consider are the number of employees and customers who may be visiting the home, and the type of materials and equipment used. Most occupancy permits can be issued in a few minutes. If no new construction or alterations are required, there is no charge for an occupancy permit.

The applicant is then referred to the Commissioner of the Revenue's Office where applications for the County's business license are processed. The Business Auditor will determine the appropriate classification for the business, collect the license fee and issue the license. Before visiting the County offices, please note that if you are not the owner of the property you will have to provide written permission from the owner to conduct your business. You should also make sure that all real estate taxes have been paid on the property.

If you have any questions, please call the Community Development Department at (434) 332-9597, or Campbell County's Business Auditor at (434) 332-9584.

The Mark of Good Parenting—Back to School By Mark Yudowitch, Training Specialist Campbell County Department of Social Services

Yet another summer comes to a close and the school doors are again open for business. Students say "goodbye" to summer vacation and "hello" to formal classroom settings. There are several things parents can do to make this transition smoother for their children and for themselves.

Hopefully, parents have already met teachers and plan to maintain communication during the school year. Two basic facts should always be remembered: One, children naturally want to learn, beginning with early childhood exploration and continuing for a lifetime if properly nurtured, and two, teachers share the same fundamental goal as parents – to help children succeed. Whenever the two disagree on how to accomplish that goal, both must remember that they are on the same

Again, parents are the first and most important teachers. They can talk to their children, read to their children, instill personal and social skills, and model enthusiasm for learning. Structuring time and monitoring television viewing are recommended. While it is true that children learn when they are ready and at their own pace, the ones who enter school from this type of supportive home environment enjoy greater success in

Parents, those first critical teachers, can continue their involvement in their child's school life. They can encourage regular attendance, provide necessary research material, establish a place to study, review homework, and discuss each school day. They can ask open-ended questions to get children talking and praise every success, big and small. Most parents recognize the value of a formal education in today's job market. By becoming invested in their children's education, parents can achieve their ultimate goal: To know that when they "let go," they have produced bright, independent, and self-sufficient young adults.

Recent Change in Zoning Ordinance Removes Building Height Restrictions

On July 7, 2008, the Board of Supervisors approved the semi-annual update of the County Code, which included a change to the zoning ordinance. Previously, the height of buildings was limited to fifty feet in areas zoned for general business use or multi-family dwellings.

The maximum allowed height was increased to seventy feet based on a recommendation from Public Safety and Community Development staff, following the acquisition of a new aerial fire fighting apparatus. The new equipment allows safety personnel to reach greater heights, permitting architects and developers the flexibility to design taller buildings that do not require additional land.

It is hoped that allowing denser development in certain areas of the County will decrease the demand for sprawling growth into rural areas. If you have any questions, please call the Community Development Department at (434) 332-9597.
